Summer task

In order to be really successful in Media Studies, it is essential to become active consumers of a range of media; film, television (in as many of its form as possible), radio, newspapers, magazine and emedia.

It is also critical to understand the place of media in society as well as the changing media landscape. In order to do this, students must read/ subscribe to the Media Guardian as well as staying up to date with news linked to the production and consumption of the media. Essentially, over summer, as well as reading the Media Guardian, we would encourage students to read at least one broadsheet newspaper a week (newspaper or online).

All must:

Choose one media text of your choice and analyse it in relation to the key concepts (Media language, Audience, Representation and Institution). If you choose a moving image text, you should watch the first 2 minutes only. You should present your findings in a creative way – poster, power point presentation, written essay. The more innovative, the better!
